17 ) CLARIFICATION
 ) (Docket No. 465)

18 In this patent infringement suit, Software Rights Archive, LLC ("SRA") moves for 19 clarification of the court's July 8, 2011 Report and Recommendation ("R&R"). See Docket No. 451.
20 Google, Inc. ("Google") opposes the request, to which SRA has replied. The parties appeared for 21 oral argument earlier today. Having considered the arguments of the parties, the court GRANTS-
22 IN-PART the request as follows:

23 1. The January 27, 2011 order underlying the R&R still applies unless modified by the 24 presiding judge's order on the motion for sanctions giving rising to the R&R. That order, however,
25 requires Google, among other things, to produce either documents sufficient to show what accused
26 activity is conducted inside the United States and what accused activity is conducted outside the 27 United States or to provide such information in a supplementary interrogatory response. It does not 28 require both.

3. The R&R that Google make available for inspection "[a]ll source code for all accused indexing and serving activity" means all code, whether configuration files, data structures, or any code for accused indexing and serving activity.

5. The R&R that SRA recover fees and costs is limited to those fees and costs associated with RA's efforts in bringing the motions reflected at Docket No. 231 and 355.
